

Queens Road Academy is proud to share that it has added to its growing number of accreditations.

The school has just been awarded the National SEND Inclusion Award (SENDIA) in recognition of the high-quality education and support it provides pupils and their families.

The award focuses on removing barriers to learning through early identification of SEND, inclusive teaching and leadership, and helps schools to evaluate impact to improve classroom practice and pupil outcomes. We applied for the SEND Inclusion Award as we felt it was a robust way of celebrating our successes, improving outcomes for our children, and rewarding the hard work of students, parents, and staff with regards to the provision for SEND students.

“Helpful, trustworthy, smart and supportive”- are all words the children used when asked to describe help they received from school, by the assessor. Mr Kaufman said “The award process provided a clear self-review strategy which aided monitoring and reflective practice. The Award provides us with a standard we can share to parents to prove our on-going commitment to ensure all learners needs are met and beyond.”

Thank you to all our; children, families, staff and Mrs Karan (DHT/Inclusion Leader) who supported this award success
